Lyphe Australia

Driving FAQ

- In most states and territories there have been no changes to road safety laws to distinguish between medical and illicit users of cannabis.
- Do not drive if you have ingested a medicine containing THC.
- Make sure your 'CBD only' product is fully isolated, <0.1mg THC content. Some may be sold as 'low THC' but still contain enough to show up on a roadside test.
- In theory the saliva tests that the police utilise can detect THC in your saliva for 8-12 hours post dose, however this can vary by person and is not a guarantee you will test negative.
- THC saliva test kits can be purchased at pharmacies or online however Lyphe Clinic cannot vouch for their accuracy or reliability.

Further information

Information and laws may vary by State or Territory - seek applicable information

Department of Health - Drug laws in Australia

www.health.gov.au/health-topics/drugs/aboutdrugs/ drug-laws-in-australia

RACGP - Medical cannabis and driving www1.racgp.org.au/ajgp/2021/june/medicalcannabis- and-driving

Scan QR to schedule a Nurse Call

Lyphe Australia

Drive Change - Support for Medical Cannabis

www.drivechangemc.org.au

NSW Health - Prescribed Cannabis Medicines and fifitness to drive

www.medicinalcannabis.nsw.gov.au/__data/assets/pdf_file/0025/2869/Cannabis-and-Driving-Fact-Sheet- Health-Professionals-FINAL.pdf

Victoria Roads - Medicinal Cannabis and Driving

www.vicroads.vic.gov.au/safety-and-roadrules/ driver-safety/drugs-and-alcohol/medicinalcannabis- and-driving

Queensland - Cannabis and driving - get the facts

https://streetsmarts.initiatives.qld.gov.au/drugdriving/cannabis-factsheet

*Information updated 23/2/2022